

Trash Free Parks

Did you know that many of the Maryland State Parks are trash free? This means that visitors must take their trash with them when they leave. Park rangers take great pride in keeping their parks clean and safe. Sometimes visitors forget that animals still live in the parks after the people go home. Trash that is left behind can be harmful to these animals and the environment. One of the ways you can help the rangers is by picking up forgotten trash. If you need an extra trash bag ask a staff member!

Activity:

The visitors who were picnicking here left some of their trash behind. Take a look at the scene below and see how many pieces of trash you can find. Circle the pieces as you find them.
